CARPENTER IS PUT ON PAROLE

Court Allows Youthful Forger to Go after Imposing Four Conditions. Others Plead Guilty. Several Cases are Disposed of.

At a session of Court on Monday R. T. Carpenter, the youth who some weeks ago forged the name of R. T. Little on a check at the Funkhouser and Sachs store, was put on parole for a period of two years, the Court imposing the following conditions: that he write once each month to the Court telling how he is getting along; that he shall not frequent pool and billiard rooms; that he shall obey his father and mother; and that he shall pay the costs, by giving his note to the county commissioners to pay $8 every two weeks.

Carpenter's mother lives in Waynesboro. She was here last week to intercede for her son who, it will be recalled, secured goods and cash to the amount of $25. He got away but was brought back from the Eastern Shore of Maryland by County Detective Wilson.

Clarence Shultz and Ralph Shultz pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery growing out of a fracas in Cashtown several weeks ago. The former paid the costs of prosecution and a fine of $10 while Ralph Shultz was given a fine of $5 and costs.

Two trainriders, Wallace Francis and Philip Haines, both colored, pleaded guilty to carrying concealed weapons. Francis was given twenty three days in jail and Haines thirty days.

Hattie Steinhour pleaded guilty to larceny in the case of a few weeks ago, which grew out of her taking goods from Miss Maud Menchey. She was put on parole for a period of two years subject to good behavior and general good deportment. If at any time during the two years the parole is broken the defendant will be committed.

The acceptance of Dennis C. Asper and Charles F. Asper, of the bequest of real estate at a specific price under the will of F. A. Asper, deceased, was approved and ordered to be recorded.

The Citizens' Trust Company was appointed guardian of George Myers Shank, minor child of George A. Shank, deceased, late of Tyrone township.

Petition of residents of Mount Joy and Cumberland townships asking for a bridge over Rock Creek at the place where the public highway from Taneytown Road in Cumberland township near Round Top to the White Church on Baltimore Pike in Mount Joy township crosses said creek; order made as prayed for and the Court appointed John A. Irwin, of Franklin township; Oscar D. McMillan, of Cumberland township; and C. W. Stoner, Esq., of Gettysburg, as viewers.

Petition of residents of Butler township for appointment of viewers to lay out a public road in said township; the Court appointed C. W. Stoner, S. Miley Miller and Hanson W. Lightner.

The petition of qualified electors of Mt. Pleasant township for the appointment of commissioners to divide the township into election districts; the Court appointed John A. Shorb, of Littlestown; John A. Stambaugh, of Berwick township; and Hon. S. S. Mehring, of Union township.

J. L. Williams, Esq., was appointed auditor to dispose of the exceptions in the estate of Stephen Weidner deceased.

Elizabeth Hillman vs. Norman Hillman. Libel in divorce. Subpoena awarded.

Mary Louise Jacobs vs. George Washington Jacobs. Divorce granted. Mary C. Pottorff vs. Chester I. Pottorff. Divorce granted.

Alice J. McClean vs. St. John McClean. Divorce proceeding. Edward A. Weaver, Esq., appointed to take testimony.

Emma R. Bucher vs. Charles Rudisill. Exceptions sustained. Judgment of justice reversed and judgment on certiorari entered for defendant.

Charter awarded the Biglerville Agricultural, Horticultural and Poultry Association.

Charter awarded the Trinity Reformed church of Biglerville.

HOUSE SHORTAGE KEEPS OUT PLANT

Large New Factory would Locate here but Fears it Cannot Get Employees on Account of House Famine. Great Demand.

Gettysburg may have another industry as large and successful as the Reaser and Gettysburg furniture plants, provided something is done to meet the present house shortage in the town. The parties interested have selected Gettysburg as the most desirable place for the plant, they are well known to local people and would conduct an industry of great benefit to the town. This information is given for publication by a gentleman prominently identified with one of the town's most successful enterprises, who desires that for the present his name be withheld.

Not only is the "house famine" which now exists here keeping away this large plant but it is also likely to hamper the work of the two furniture factories. Mr. Reaser, the manager of the local plants, says:

"We have just twenty-five men employed at one or other of our factories who would occupy houses if they were to be had. Some of these live in Hagerstown, others in York and go between their homes and Gettysburg every week or two. If the houses were here for them their families would be living in the town. Others are residents of the county who want to come into town but can find no place to live. While this condition is bad now we are specially worried over the effect it may have on the future development of our plants. We are here to stay and sure of a steady growth and permanent existence. We fear that this inability of new men to get homes in the town may keep away the necessary labor for future development."

These two furniture plants, Mr. Reaser says, have a combined payroll of $2500 weekly, distributed to 257 men. That this payroll will be enlarged steadily is his firm belief provided the house shortage is met.

The desire of a number of county people to move to Gettysburg this spring has been very apparent for some weeks and a number of cases are known where it was necessary for them to give up the idea and move to Waynesboro, Hanover or some other town in order to get a place to live. Few people seem to realize the condition with which the town is confronted. In discussing the situation this morning a business man said:

"We understand the state of affairs and little is being done to remedy it. The anniversary celebration in July has nothing to do with it and the shortage will be even more acute next year for the town is growing rapidly with people who intend to make this their future home. It is a great opportunity for permanent progress and something should be done to keep these people from going to other towns."

One of the most prosperous farmers and fruit growers of the upper end of Adams county while calling at The Times office recently, said:

"Do you know you are losing some very good people as citizens of your town? They can't rent homes and you have an ordinance preventing their building their own properties. I refer to your law which does not allow frame structures. Three Adams county men have told me in the last few days that they have gone to Gettysburg to purchase lots and build but when they found they could not put up frame houses they felt they could not stand the expense of a more costly dwelling and gave up the idea."

Those who understand the condition which confronts the town seem to be at a loss to know how it is best to be met. Possibly twenty or thirty residences will be built here this spring and summer but that is little more than a "drop in the bucket". Most of them will be occupied by their owners and they will do little to relieve the present congestion.

Waynesboro has had the same condition recently and there an organization has been formed to erect one hundred new houses for sale or rental. This idea has been discussed here but nothing definite has been accomplished.

THOSE WHO ARE TAKEN BY DEATH

Former Proprietor of the City Hotel Dies at Home of his Mother. McSherrystown Woman Dies in Hospital. Other Deaths.

SARAH J. LAWRENCE

Sarah Jane Lawrence, of McSherrystown, died at the York hospital Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, following an operation for an internal abscess. She was aged 45 years.

The deceased was ill but a few days, having been taken to the hospital the Thursday previous, in a critical condition, an immediate operation being the only hope for saving her life.

She was a daughter of the late David and Harriet Lawrence, of McSherrystown, and is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Edward Willet, of McSherrystown, with whom she resided; also, three brothers, Ignatius Lawrence, of McSherrystown; Joseph and Gregory Lawrence, of Conowingo township; three sisters, Mrs. Vincent Myers, Hanover; Mrs. M. H. Hemler, McSherrystown, and Mrs. Harry Adams, Mt. Pleasant township.

Funeral Tuesday, March 4th, from St. Mary's church, mass of requiem at 9 a. m., Rev. L. Aug. Reuter officiating. Interment on the family lot in Conowingo chapel cemetery.

MRS. TOBIAS REED

Mrs. Tobias Reed died on Monday morning at Trevanian, near Taneytown, where she had been living with her daughter Mrs. Arkansas Fink.

Her home was formerly in Taneytown, but for some time Mr. and Mrs. Reed had been living with their two daughters, Mrs. John Study, of Route 8, Gettysburg; and Mrs. Arkansas Fink. She leaves her husband two daughters and four sons. The sons are John J., James and Curtis Reed, all of Taneytown; and Dallas Reed, of New Windsor. She also leaves three brothers, Alexander Crabbs and Wilson F. Creps, of Ohio; and Dallas Krebs, of Hanover.

Funeral Wednesday morning from the home of Mrs. Fink. Services at the Taneytown Reformed church. Interment in the cemetery adjoining.

J. HARRY BRUBAKER

J. Harry Brubaker, formerly proprietor of the City Hotel, died at five o'clock Saturday morning at his home in Elizabethtown. He leaves his wife and one daughter, Grace. Funeral Wednesday afternoon from the home of his mother in Elizabethtown.

EAST BERLIN TROLLEY

Organization of New Electric Railway Company Has Been Effected.

Under the plans of the newly organized East Berlin Trolley company, the proposed line will run directly to York, without effecting a juncture with the Dover line of the York Railways company at any point, as had been contemplated when the project was put before the York corporation to extend to East Berlin. Two surveys will be made and the most desirable route will be chosen.

The officers of the East Berlin organization are: Peter C. Smith, East Berlin, president; William G. Leas, East Berlin, vice president; Dr. Eugene Elgin, East Berlin, secretary; George F. Jacobs, East Berlin, assistant secretary; William D. Himes, New Oxford, corresponding secretary; Joseph Naylor, Weigeltown, treasurer.

The board of directors, in addition to the officers, includes J. L. Baulblitz, East Berlin; Aaron Jacobs, Altoona; Frazier Altland, Swam; Pierce Stambaugh, Big Mount, and Franklin P. Lauer, Weigeltown.

REAP HARVEST

Feldspar Quarries Reap Small Fortunes for Farmers.

Across the line in Howard County, Maryland, small fortunes are being made following the discovery and development of feldspar mines or quarries. Farm laborers are scarce and the excitement of the discovery has kept up wonderfully.

Owing to the ready sale of the feldspar many of the residents believe there is gold in the rock. This is probably caused by one of the mine owners speaking figuratively of their property as "gold mines."

THOUSANDS WELCOME TO WILSON

Wild Over Wilson, Marshall Too.

PARADE IS BEST YET

Many 'New Wrinkles' in the Inaugural Pageant.

JUST HOW IT ALL HAPPENS

Washington, March 4.—In the presence of the biggest crowd that ever packed and jammed itself into the great plaza at the east end of the capitol, surrounded by high civil and military dignitaries, diplomats and statesmen of his own and foreign countries, Woodrow Wilson, erstwhile governor of New Jersey and president-elect, today took the oath of office that made him the twenty-eighth president of the United States.

Less than an hour before, with solemn ceremony, Thomas R. Marshall, the vice president-elect, had been inducted into his office in the senate chamber before the members of both houses. Somewhat earlier still President Taft, the president and vice president-elect, with their respective guard of honor, the Essex troop, of Newark, N. J., and the Culver Black Horse troop, of Indiana, had swept down Pennsylvania avenue on their way to the capitol between row on row of cheering, shouting thousands.

Soon after daybreak this morning the crowds began to gather along Pennsylvania avenue and in front of the great platform that had been erected for the inaugural exercises at the eastern end of the capitol. Long before noon every available inch of space was taken.

As the august procession, which precedes the inaugural ceremony, filed out of the capitol and wound its way across the platform a hush fell over the crowd. Mechanically many uncovered their heads.

The sergeants-at-arms of the senate and house, followed by the marshal of the supreme court and the marshal of the District of Columbia, made up the vanguard of the procession of high dignitaries. Behind these last came Chief Justice Edward D. White, of the supreme court, whose duty it was to administer the oath of office to the president-elect, and the associate justices, followed by the committee on arrangements.

Then came the president and the president-elect, and at their rear a distinguished following of ambassadors, governors and other dignitaries, including the newly sworn vice president.

When the procession paused every ear strained attention to catch the words that would usher into the chair of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln the first Democrat to gain that high place in a score of years.

Solemnly and distinctly, though most of the waiting thousands hanging on the event of his words could not even see the motion of his lips, the chief justice administered the oath of office to the president-elect.

An instant the waiting host stood silent. Then it became a shrieking, leaping mob, roaring a pandemoniac welcome to the nation's new executive and all but smothering the saluting cannon which first gave notice that a new president had been inaugurated and a new administration begun.

From the crowd in the square and on the platform the other massed multitudes that lined the broad sides of Pennsylvania avenue took their cue, and it was many minutes before President Wilson could begin his brief inaugural address. Even then so great was the clamor that only those nearest to him could distinguish what he said.

Immediately after the address was finished President Wilson, accompanied by the ex-president, hastened to the Pennsylvania avenue side of the capitol, where carriages awaited to take the party to the luncheon in the executive mansion.

During the drive Mr. Taft sat on the left of his successor. In this he followed established precedent, a precedent that was broken four years ago by Colonel Roosevelt, who went directly from the capitol after the inaugural exercises were over to the Union station to take a train for Oyster Bay.

All along their route up Pennsylvania avenue the old and the new presidents were greeted tumultuously. In fact, to an observer not familiar with the situation it might have been difficult to determine which was the incoming and which the outgoing chief executive, so well did the genial Taft smile match the beaming features of President Wilson.

At the executive mansion the two were met by Mrs. Taft, who hitherto had taken no part in the day's ceremonies, and a subcommittee of the official reception committee. President Wilson also saw for the first time since early today Mrs. Wilson and their three daughters, who had been under the escort of special military aides during the ceremonies at the capitol.

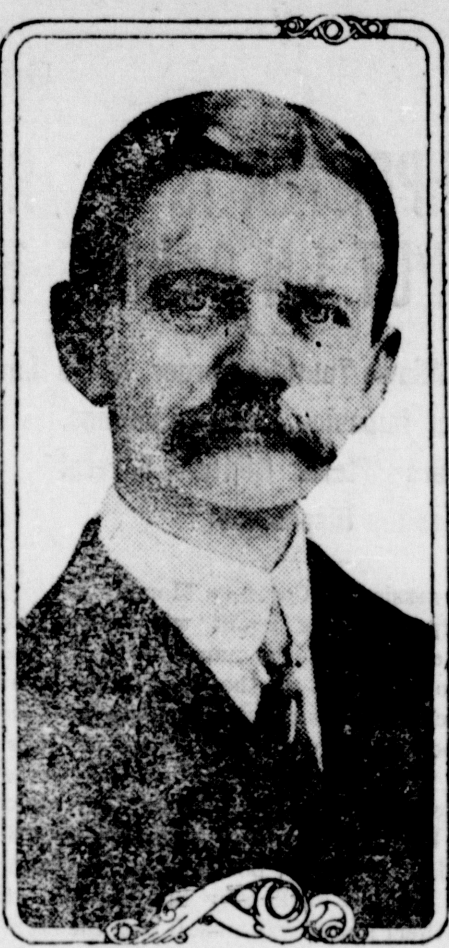

Election Notice

Notice is hereby given to the stockholders of the Gettysburg Ice & Storage Company, of Gettysburg, Pa., that an election of seven directors to serve one year, will be held at the office of J. L. Butt, Esq., in the First National Bank Building, on Tuesday, March 11th, 1913, at 7:30 P. M.

VICE PRESIDENT MARSHALL.

There was a brief exchange of compliments between Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Taft, in which the latter gracefully turned over the suzerainty that had been hers for the past four years to the new hostess of the White House. Soon afterward the ex-President and Mrs. Taft quietly left through a rear entrance to take the 3:05 train from the Union station for Augusta, Ga. Here they will spend several weeks before going to New Haven, where Mr. Taft will take up his work as professor of law in Yale university.

Next to this great event, so essential to the rest of today's celebration, the great military and civic pageant; this afternoon holds the public's interest. Considered purely from a spectacular viewpoint, it is not only by far the biggest feature of the inauguration, but in many respects surpasses anything that Washington has seen in a long series of inaugural spectacles.

The decorations also are unique and attractive in character. Pennsylvania avenue from end to end of the line of march gleams with green and white, the color scheme adopted by the city officials.

The stand where the president is now reviewing the parade, erected on the White House grounds, follows out the same general decorative idea, though here the architect has chosen to weave into the stand's design the characteristics of Mount Vernon, the ancient home of the first president, and of Monticello, the homestead of the patron saint of Democracy, Thomas Jefferson.

The head of the first grand division was almost abreast of the White House when President Wilson first showed himself in the glassed-in section of the reviewing stand that had been reserved for him. His appearance was the signal for a wave of applause that swept all before it, drowning the music of the bands, as it rolled toward the capitol.

Soon after the cheering that greeted the president's entrance to the reviewing stand died away far down the avenue arose another tumult that contained a deeper note.

Swiftly the swelling voices rolled nearer, reached the stand and passed upward and then far down the avenue there came into view the faded blue uniforms of the Grand Army of the Republic.

There were many in the crowd who topped cheering as the veterans of 1865 passed by and turned away their heads. Even the president, self-contained master of self as he has shown himself to be, was visibly affected. He was seen to swallow hard several times, and once he turned away to wipe his glasses, which seemed suddenly to have become misty.

According to Major General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., chief of staff and grand marshal of the parade, the regular army section of it was a model for other nations to copy. Certainly, it was one of the most impressive features of the whole spectacle. If regarded from the standpoint of military efficiency and smartness.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S VIEWS

First Obligation of Law is to Keep Society Sound.

The inaugural address of President Woodrow Wilson in part is as follows: There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the house of representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of president and vice president have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party.

A Kindness to the Fish.

Ethel, who was ten years old, was studying her geographical reader and learned that fish are placed in brine before they are dried and prepared for sale. After explaining that brine is very strong salt water the teacher asked why the fish were placed in it. Ethel's face was flushed with sudden understanding, and she promptly replied: "Because they are used to salt water."—Youth's Companion.

It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered, and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of the law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do and not leave the others—none, the old fashioned, never to be heeded, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day: To lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearth fire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon, and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here must not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's lives call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriots, all forward looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them if they will but counsel and sustain me.

Your Blessings.

If you'll stop courtin' yo' troubles for awhile maybe you'll have time ter discover dat you've had enough blessings for a good sized lifetime.—Atlanta Constitution.

Man Gets a New Stomach

After trying to enjoy life for years with a good stomach he gets wise. "I was bothered for years with stomach trouble and gastritis. Food laid like lead in my stomach and fermented, forming gas. This caused a pressure on my heart, so that I choked and gasped for breath. I thought my time had come. M.I.O.-NA cured me after I had doctored without success."

—Wm. V. Matthews, Bloomington, Ind. Call it Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach, Indigestion or Dyspepsia; it matters not. M.I.O.-NA Stomach Tablets will drive out all the misery and give you practically a new, clean, willing-to-work stomach or The People's Drug Store will refund the price.

That's honorable, isn't it? So if you want to get rid of your sour, gassy, heavy, stupid, irritable stomach get a 50-cent box today.

RHEUMATIC Pains Go Swollen Joints Vanish

RHEUMA—Greatest Remedy for Rheumatism, Gout and Sciatica Only 50 Cents and Money Back from The People's Drug Store if Not Satisfied.

Thousands of persons during the last year freed themselves from the bondage of rheumatism; rid themselves the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; threw away canes and crutches, and from helpless became able to walk and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took RHEUMA; the modern enemy of Rheumatism, which is also sure to cure Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Gout, Chronic Neuralgia or Kidney disease.

Don't be skeptical about RHEUMA. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous Uric Acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are going to be cured in less than a week.

Don't think because RHEUMA is sold for only 50 cents a bottle that it won't bring you back to health. There is no guess work about it. RHEUMA is better than any remedy at ten times the price. Ask the People's Drug Store.

YOUNG MEN WANTED

Government Pays $900 a Year to Start and Increases to $1800.
Any young man with ordinary common sense has a splendid opportunity to prepare for the Civil Service examination for Railway Mail Clerks, which takes place in this vicinity May 3rd. It is estimated that the new Parcel Post bill will double the Postal Service force. There is plenty of time to prepare for this examination, and for Rural Free Delivery Carriers, Post Office Clerks and Carriers examinations. All men between 18 and 35 who desire a steady position at good pay, with yearly vacation, should write today for free information how to proceed. Address: WEBSTER INSTITUTE, Buffalo, N. Y. EXHIBITING DRESSED POULTRY AND EGGS.

Until recently to fairs nor poultry shows have encouraged the exhibition of dressed poultry and table eggs, two points where Uncle Sam's shows are far behind England, Ireland, Denmark, France, Belgium and even Canada.
Such exhibits have mostly been shown by students at our agricultural colleges, the fairs and poultry shows mainly encouraging the fancy, being "dedicated to fanciers, who appreciated the beautiful in standard bred fowls—the people whose ideas are not based upon pounds of flesh and dozens of eggs." But the people who raise these pounds of meat and delicious eggs for

THE FLY'S BALANCERS.

Without These Organs the Insect Would Tumble to the Ground.
The insects of the Diptera order, to which the common housefly belongs, have, as a rule, one pair of wings and rudimentary remnants of another pair in the form of a club shaped organ on either side of the thorax behind the wings. These organs are called "balancers" and, as experiments have shown, are indispensable in the maintenance of equilibrium.
A fly from which they have been removed cannot direct its flight, and if it tries to fly from the edge of a table will immediately take a downward course, dropping to the floor on its head about three feet away and falling over on its back. Similarly, if it tries to fly from the floor after succeeding in getting on its feet again it will rise in the air two or three inches and then again tumble, striking its head and turning over on its back as before, but only about four inches from its starting point. Horizontal and ascending flight becomes absolutely impossible.
The similarity between these artificially produced insect mishaps and what happens to an aeroplane accident is striking, and a study of why the removal of the fly's balancers causes it to upset may go a long way toward solving the problem in aeroplane construction.—Westminster Gazette.

better poultry products. They inspire competitors to finer effort. We hope to see more of them at the county fairs whose chief aim should be to encourage production of the useful.

The Allentown fair charged no entry fee for eggs, offered liberal premiums and judged the eggs according to the following excellent plan:

Farm eggs had their own competition, and each breed of thoroughbred poultry had its own egg competition. Then sweepstakes prizes went to the best dozen of brown shelled and the best dozen of white shelled eggs. The scale of points was: Quality, 30; freshness, 20; size, 20; color, 20; shape, 10; total, 100.

Quality includes color and condition of yolk, denseness and firmness of albumen and thickness and cleanness of shell.

HEAD'S UP THAT'S THE WAY

Your horse trot's out, when you have put him in good condition with Dr. Hudson's Liquid Conditioner. One 50c bottle makes you (32 doses) 16 days treatment, for one horse, or if you want you can get three 50c bottles for $1.50 at my office. Ask your neighbors about Dr. Hudson's Liquid Conditioner. I hear what they say, they will tell you that it's the best horse medicine ever sold. You can feed it to any horse, or any mare that's in foal, with safety. It has been tried and used by more farmers than any other conditioner on the market to-day. Further—none of you have ever fed your horses any of Dr. Hudson's Liquid Conditioner, and you want to give it a trying test without much expense, cut out this Ad, bring it in to my office, and get a full size 50c bottle for only 25c any time within the next ten days. I want every farmer in Adams County to know its value.
Yours Respectfully,
Dr. E. D. Hudson,
Veterinarian.

QUEER BURIAL SERVICE.

How Adaman Islanders Protect Their Dead From Evil Spirits.

Strange is the burial service among the Adaman Islanders. It is the custom of the islanders to drop the bodies of their parents into the sea at the end of ropes and leave them there until nothing remains but the bones, which they then gather and hang from the roofs of their huts.

It is a common custom for a relative to sit by the hour and watch the bones of some relative. This is the way they have of showing their love and respect.

The bodies are treated in this fashion so that the evil spirits cannot tense and pinch them. All that is left are the dried bones, and these are placed high so that if the evil spirits wander into the huts they will have a hard time to find them. If a bone is carried away it means some bad spirit has seized it, and this means that some terrible calamity will befall the family.

In the Katanga district of central Africa when a chief and his wife dies there is great feasting and celebrating. Some of these festivals last three or four days. After the bodies are laid to rest with dancing and rejoicing because they are going to rule over a higher sphere their relatives and friends do not depart until they leave one or more chairs and a supply of clothes. This is done because the souls are expected to come out and wander about their graves.—Chicago Tribune.

Not a Total Wreck.

"What have you done with your play?"

"It didn't go as a farce, so I had some music composed and tried it as an opera, but it fell flat. Then I boiled it down into a vaudeville sketch, but nobody would touch it."

"Too bad. A total loss, eh?"

"Not total. There's one good joke in it; I can sell that for 50 cents."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND HIS FAMILY

Here is the new president and Mrs. Wilson and their daughters, Jessie, Eleanor and Margaret.

WILSON'S CABINET

Garrison, of New Jersey, Secretary of War, and Lane Interior.

Washington, March 4.—The following list of the cabinet as President-elect Wilson will send it to the senate tomorrow for confirmation:

Secretary of state—William J. Bryan, Nebraska.

Secretary of the Treasury—William G. McAdoo, New York.

Attorney general—James C. McReynolds, Tennessee.

Secretary of war—Lindley M. Garrison, vice chancellor of New Jersey.

Postmaster general—Albert Sidney Burleson, Texas.

Secretary of the navy—Josephus Daniels, North Carolina.

Secretary of the interior—Franklin K. Lane, California.

Secretary of agriculture—Professor David M. Houston, of the Washington university of Missouri.

Secretary of commerce—William C. Redfield, New York.

Secretary of labor—William B. Wilson, Pennsylvania.

The surprises in this list of those whom it is flaily asserted, the new president has selected as the members of his official family are Lane, Garrison and Houston. The others have been reasonably well known, some of them, Bryan and Daniels and Burleson for several weeks, and others for several days.

Appearances Deceptive.

"Who's the thin little man with the melancholy expression?"

"That's Hummer, the poet, who wrote the beautiful verses with the refrain, 'Life is what you make it—you can make it glad.' He suffers from chronic dyspepsia."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good Advice.

"Do you think that it is possible to remedy the most common memory fault in one lesson, as this firm advertises?"

"Surely. Don't borrow, and then you won't have to forget the persons who loan you money."—Buffalo Express.

SUFFRAGE PARADE NEAR DISASTER

Spectators Overawe Scant Supply of Policemen.

OVER 300 WOMEN COLLAPSE

Poor Arrangements in Handling Sight-seers Results in Disorganization of the Parade.

Washington, March 4.—The most splendid procession of women in equal suffrage history, fully 5000 in number, suffered its way westward along Pennsylvania avenue through the greatest aggregation of spectators that ever turned out in Washington, while from beginning to end the police mismanagement was the worst in the known world. Fully a quarter of a million people witnessed the pageant.

The paraders naturally wanted at least the width of the car tracks to march on, but even this space was not accorded them by the crowd, and in their efforts to jam their way through the crush much of the splendor of the procession naturally was marred by the confusion.

Near the main reviewing stand, at the south entrance to the treasury building a Washington liquor dealer dropped dead of heart disease in one of the almost constant succession of crushes that followed each attempt of police, mounted, in autos and afoot, and of the special policemen, a handful of troopers from Fort Meyer and Boy Scouts, to make a new opening for the broken sections of the parade to squeeze through.

In the short stretch of Pennsylvania avenue between Eleventh and Fifteenth streets over 300 women and girls were taken out of the press and hurried to the emergency hospital. Another woman was carried into the same hospital with her foot badly mangled by the hoofs of a mounted policeman's horse.

Autos that tried to butt the crowd back in advance of the procession ran over innumerable toes. A succession of squeals, howlings of pathfinders, autos manned by plain clothesmen yells and curses from men, the cries of mounted and foot policemen who brandished their long clubs above the head of the struggling masses, all merged into one uproar along the mile or more the paraders tried to march.

The moment the automobiles at the head of the line had cleared a path the crowd, once the police and the head of the line had passed, would ooze in again, whites and blacks, like chocolate and vanilla ice cream melting rapidly together and drowning out the suffragists' "Loveliest platoons of loveliness." Heralds, pages, floats, symbolic groups were soon huddled in disorder in the midst of a surging crowd that was beyond the power of the police to control.

It goes without saying that when the women of the United States of America look over the American peach crop to decorate the very head of the procession the women nearly selected Miss Inez Milholland and Miss Alberta Hill, of New York. Miss Milholland, one grand ecstasy in white and mounted astride a white horse, was down on the program as a "mounted herald." She was not any such thing. Miss Milholland was a peach. The crowd jamming close said so. Miss Hill was vanguard of the peach crop, wearing natty tailored riding clothes and puttees and riding headgear designed along the lines of the colonial cocked hat.

Miss Mary Anderson, who with twenty other women and girls, was garbed in classic drapery, barefooted except for sandals, to enact the symbolic tableaux on the treasury steps as the line passed, waited and waited for the line to appear and finally collapsed in tears.

The tableaux and the other features of the much heralded spectacle were passed before the eyes of a hundred thousand persons in a half-hearted manner.

The spectacle had been so beautifully planned that it maintained much of its beauty even under these circumstances and the straggling sections were cheered lustily as they appeared. It looked for a time as if the pageant might not be able to reach the finishing point in anything like the shape planned. The great majority of the women in the line maintained their self-possession and waited patiently until the police made a way for them through the crowds which, though beyond the power of the police, were at no time bolsterous.

Find Petrified Forest.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 4.—Laborers in a clay "mine" of the Somers Brick company, at Bakersville, have unearthed a petrified forest believed to be thousands of years old and covering a tract of several hundred acres. President Warren Somers, who sent some of the excavated material to the state geologist, has received a reply stating that the substances are pieces of petrified wood.

Grocer Suicide in His Store.

Spring City, Pa., March 4.—E. H. Haupt, fifty years old, for a number of years in the grocery business here, committed suicide by hanging himself in the storeroom in the rear of his store. His body was discovered by his wife. Haupt had suffered a nervous breakdown.

A DOCTOR'S STORY

By RYLAND BELL.

After a meeting of our medical society we separated into small groups, some discussing a paper that had been read, some idly chatting and some telling experiences. In our group we fell to talking about leaving patients in the hands of nurses we were not sure of, and one of our number told the following story:

One morning when making my round of visits I was going upstairs to the room of a sick lady when I heard the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

I stopped and listened for a repetition. I did not doubt that it came from the sickroom, though the patient had not complained of her nurse, whom I had recently placed on my list of those I recommended. But I did not hear the words again, so resolved to keep my own counsel and went on to the sick chamber, knocked and was admitted.

Now, I am enough of a scientist to know that an investigator is very easily worked upon by his theories. Before entering the room I had explained in my own mind the words I had heard. A former patient of mine had once, while I was bending over her, whispered to me, "For heaven's sake, take away that nurse!" I at once made an excuse to do so, and the patient, whose nerves were shattered, told me that the woman domineered over her. I did not completely side with my patient in the matter, for she needed a firm hand, but I gave her another nurse.

Nevertheless that case influenced me in the second one, and realizing that I was influenced by it, I resolved to banish it and get at the facts without a word with the patient or the nurse. I found the nurse somewhat agitated, though the patient did not give evidence of anything unusual having happened. The nurse had just come into the room through a door opening upon a back stairway and carried a tray, on which was the invalid's luncheon.

There was no opportunity to speak to the patient alone during my visit, for the nurse did not leave the room. It has always seemed to me that for a doctor to send a nurse from the room reflects upon her, indicating that he wishes to say that to the patient which he does not wish the nurse to hear. At any rate, I once offended one of my best nurses by doing that very thing. So in this case I went away without having acquired any further information about the matter.

On my next visit I made a pretext to send the nurse out of the room to bring something I wanted, but she foiled me by going to a closet for it. I couldn't think of any other excuse and went away as uninformated as before. On my next visit I had scarcely entered the house before I again heard the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

This time, since I had not gone up stairs, the sound was farther away from me and less distinct. It seemed to come from directly over my head, though I paid no attention to this, for the door does not give us the direction of sound. I hurried upstairs and into the sickroom without knocking, hoping to learn something by taking them by surprise. I found the nurse arranging the patient's pillow. Neither showed a consciousness of anything disagreeable between them.

But despite my remedies my patient was getting worse. Probably this turned the scale in my mind against the nurse. At any rate, I determined to remove her without offending her. I told her that I had another case in which she alone would satisfy me and I would send a substitute, she reporting at the new place that evening. Then I left without saying anything to her charge about the chance, intending to do so after it had been made and at the same time give her my reasons for relieving her of her nurse.

What was my astonishment at my next visit to hear on ascending the staircase the words:

"Doctor, my nurse is killing me!"

I had only an hour before left the nurse who had had charge of the case with another patient, and here was the same complaint. I resolved to investigate on my own account. Avoiding the sickroom, I opened every door in a small room directly over the front door was a parrot on a perch beside the window where he could see my carriage drive up and see me alight and enter the house.

Here was the explanation, or a part of it. Still keeping my own counsel, realizing that I had removed the nurse unjustly, I returned to the house where I had placed the suspected woman and told her what had happened.

"Doctor," she said, "the morning you called when I was carrying in the patient's breakfast I had just passed the room where the parrot was kept and heard him say, 'Doctor, my nurse is killing me!' I was in terror when I saw you enter for fear you had heard him and would suspect me. Upon inquiry I learned that a former patient had been delirious in that house and had repeatedly accused her nurse of trying to kill her. That's where the parrot picked up the phrase and when ever he saw you enter repeated it."

I was so disgusted at the way I had been fooled that never since will I permit a parrot to remain in any house where I have a patient. There are other ways than the one I have mentioned that they may influence what is taking place in a sickroom. At any rate I don't want one about.

Conserving Energy.

"Yes," said the old man, "I find my strength is failing somewhat. I used to walk around the block every morning, but lately I feel so tired when I get halfway around I have to turn and come back."—Woman's Home Companion.

The New Mileage.

"Yep."
"Much of a trip?"
"I should say so; forty-two post cards!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A DESERT ENIGMA

Mystery of a Vanished Party of Australian Explorers.

The Leichhardt Expedition Disappeared as Though It Had Been Swallowed Up by the Earth, Which May Indeed Have Been Its Fearful Fate.

There have been recorded many strange tragedies of exploration in lone and distant lands, but no one event of the kind has ever so stirred men's minds as did the total disappearance of the well found and splendidly equipped expedition which Dr. Ludwig Leichhardt, the Franklin of Australia, led into the central deserts of Australia in 1848.

Leichhardt's design was to march right across the continent from the east coast to the west, and as he had already led a successful expedition nearly 3,000 miles through a previously unknown part of Australia, it was generally thought that he would be able to accomplish the task.

Still, there were some who doubted and prophesied disaster, and more than one wealthy friend of the doctor's refused to subscribe toward the expedition on the ground that they were not going to help him to commit suicide.

The members of the expedition numbered six whites and two blacks, an unusually large number for an exploring expedition of this nature, and besides being amply provided with flour, biscuit, tea, sugar and so on, they drove along with them fifty bullocks and 270 goats. They also had spare horses and mules in abundance.

At that time the most westerly station in southern Queensland was occupied by a squatter named McPherson, who dwelt on Copson creek. From there Leichhardt wrote a brief letter as he was about to start into the unknown land beyond.

That was the last ever heard of him or of any of his companions, and this notwithstanding the fact that expedition after expedition was afterward sent out in search of them.

As completely as though they had been swallowed up by the earth, they vanished.

This is the most puzzling part of the mystery—its completeness. Had they been killed by the natives, as was at first wrongly reported, some relics of the explorers would long since have been recovered from them. In some shape the iron work of the implements and arms they had with them would have survived.

And what of the stock? Some of the goats, at all events, must have been left alive, one would have imagined, for these are notoriously hardy animals, able to pick up a living almost anywhere. Yet none of these, nor any of the horses, mules or bullocks were ever traced.

The probability is that the ill fated expedition struck one of those waterless patches of country common in parts of Australia, into which the blacks never venture. It is not difficult in this case to prophesy what would have been their fate.

Their reserve barrels once emptied of their precious contents, the little water carried by the men in their canteens would not last more than a day or so. In the shadeless bush, in that terrific heat, death comes swiftly under such circumstances. About forty-eight hours is the limit of human endurance. Usually half that time suffices.

The explorers, we may be sure, would struggle on to the last, however, husbanding their water to the uttermost drop. The animals would be the first to go, and the desperate expedient of drinking their blood would be resorted to.

Hotter and hotter grows the air as the doomed men stagger further and further into the rainless desert.

Some lose their reason; all lose hope. Then comes the end. They separate and struggle away in ones and twos, and fall and die.

Day after day the terrible and pitiless sun looks down upon them lying there and sees them dry and shrivel into mummies.

And still no rain falls.

But one day, it may be years afterward, there arises a sandstorm of exceptional violence. The wind blows with all the strength and fury of an arctic blizzard, but driving before it sand, not snow.

When it ceases the desert is there as before; the same, yet different. Mountains of sand exist where before were valleys.

A SIMPLE PROBLEM.

The Section Boss Easily Got the Tool House in the Right Spot.

About ten years before the Eastern railroad was leased by the Boston and Maine that portion of the old road between Swampscott and Salem was in charge of Section Foreman Timothy Moynahan.

His strongest point was in doing just as he was told and doing that with energy and accuracy. So when he was notified from Beverly by Roadmaster Stevens that the section lengths were to be changed and that he was to move his tool house from the westerly end of Salem yard to halfway between mileposts 15 and 16 he started out with the determination to move the house halfway, no more, no less.

To get this halfway point he stationed one of his men at milepost 15 and another at milepost 16, and at a signal they started to walk toward each other until they met, and to a point opposite their meeting place the shanty was moved. This method of getting the correct distance did not quite suit Moynahan, especially when he remembered that one of the walkers was taller than the other and the other tripped several times on the way down.

He carried this in his mind for nearly a year, when he met the engineers measuring through for signals and asked them to tell him as they measured if his house was just halfway or not.

When the measurement was taken, the house was found to be sixty feet nearer milepost 16 than 15, and Moynahan, on being told, remarked that he thought he could fix things just right.

Later in the year the engineer met Moynahan in Salem and asked him if his tool house was now halfway between the mile posts.

"It is," he replied. "It's just halfway."

"Did you have much trouble moving it?"

"No trouble at all. I just let it stay as it was and moved the milepost."

Rough on Aunt Anna.

When Rev. Anna Howard Shaw's little grandniece of eight confessed to her mother that she could not be a suffragette because the other children made fun of her, her wee sister of six fiercely exclaimed, "I wouldn't be a coward; they've been making fun of Aunt Anna for hundreds of years!"

None to Spare.

In the days when the Clyde was navigable to Glasgow for only very small vessels, a steamer stuck in the mud near Renfrew, and the skipper was not sparing in strong language. While waiting for the rising tide he saw a little girl approaching the river with a bucket to fetch some water. This was too much for the poor captain, and leaning over the side and shaking his fist in rage at the little girl, he thus addressed her: "If you tak' ae drap o' water oot here till I get afloat, I'll warm yer ear for't"—Scottish American.

The Solemn Englishman.

An Englishman in New York got in a car and sat opposite to a lady who had a very peculiar looking child in her arms. An awfully funny looking kid it was, and the man could not keep his eyes away from it. He would look at it, look away and then look back again, absolutely fascinated by it, it was so ugly.

Finally the mother became very much annoyed over the man's rudeness and leaned over and said to him, "Rubber!"

A look of relief came over the Englishman's face as he exclaimed: "Thank heaven, madam. I thought it was real!"—New York American.

Dumas and Coppee.

The following interesting story is going the rounds of the European press. "Francois Coppee's one act play, 'The Passerby,' in which Mlle. Bernhardt appeared, attracted much attention in France. The elder Dumas was so enthusiastic over Coppee's little play that he embraced the author in the foyer of the theater in the presence of a large gathering and exclaimed:

"Oh, you talented man; tell me your name!"

"But Coppee was on guard. He knew Dumas; he knew that he was leading a luxurious life and that he borrowed money right and left to maintain such a mode of life. And Coppee was known as a rather stingy young man."

"In answer to the flattering question of Dumas, Coppee also embraced him and said:

"Oh, divine Dumas, I shall never dare to mention my insignificant name in your presence!"

"Dumas was flattered. He shook Coppee's hand warmly and exclaimed: 'I wish that every young Frenchman were as modest as you are!'"

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH

Explosion of Lamp Starts Blaze in Boarding House.

Warren, Pa., March 4.—Four persons were burned to death and one fatally burned in a fire in an Austrian boarding house at Mayburg, near here. There were fifty persons sleeping in the house at the time of the conflagration. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp. The building was two stories high, and by leaping from the second-story windows most of the inmates were able to escape from the flames.
